OFFICIAL TEXT:

One person has died and perhaps 16 people have been sickened in an E. coli outbreak traced to a Washington County strawberry farm.

The farm, a major strawberry producer in Oregon, sells to buyers who in turn distribute to farmers markets and roadside stands. The fields implicated in the outbreak stopped production at the end of July. But Oregon health officials worry that consumers might have purchased contaminated berries and turned them into jam, stored them in the refrigerator or packed them in the freezer.

The berries were not sold with a label, and could be mixed with other fruit. Anyone who bought unmarked berries from a farmers market or roadside stand before the end of July should throw them out.

Health authorities said that strawberries sold since Aug. 1, in supermarkets, south of Benton County or east of Multnomah County or picked at Jaquith Strawberry Farm's U-pick field are safe. No other berries are implicated in the outbreak.
